NON SIBI

INTRODUCTION.

THE work of collecting the History and Genealogical Record of the family of David Sage, has been several times attempted, and as often given up, for reasons at first not clearly understood but since made plain to me while pursuing the object I had in view; and in a work of this kind it may not be the least interesting part of the history to relate the cause of this effort, the difficulties encountered, the mode pursued to carry it forward, the discouragement met with and obstacles overcome, and encouragement received from time to time, which led me forward step by step, until it has been brought to its present state, however imperfect it may prove to be.

It has been a generally received opinion that nearly all bearing the name of Sage throughout the United States were related in nearer or more remote degree, and the result of this work, proves the correctness of the opinion. It being ascertained that about 94 of 100 of this name now living in the United States are the lineal descendants of David Sage, the small per centage not belonging thereto being for most part of quite recent imigration. (Appendix, Note A.)

Being laid aside by infirmity from the active life I had been accustomed to follow, I commenced this work as pastime for unoccupied hours, scarcely thinking of prosecuting it to its present extent, and had only the gratification of myself and a few near friends in view. But being once engaged thereon I found a strange fascination leading me forward; I suppose, like that felt by the archæologist in searching among the buried cities and remains of antiquity, each discovery only led onward with greater zeal and new and increasing interest to other discoveries long hid from the knowledge of mankind. And this feeling was strengthened by words of cheer received by letters from distant friends, and those near at hand coupled with the urgent entreaty to "Go Forward."

Thus, led along step by step, receiving words of cheer on the one hand and neglect and indifference on the other, I still pursued "the even tenor of my way," from pastime to severe mental labor, until I have collected material for this work, however imperfect it may prove to be, but if errors are found I ask that they may be attributed to the true cause, which arises not from want of effort upon my part to get at the facts, but from the neglect of many to whom I have written to to reply, thus leaving me to seek other sources of information to enable me to collect statistics, which, a little attention on their part and a little of the courtesy we ought to extend to each other, would have entirely obviated.

The records of the Congregational Church in Cromwell, with which the family of David Sage was connected from its first organization, 1715; contained record of baptism of members of this family entire, for a period of about fifty years, or until a spirit of emigration began to act. From the period of the first settlement of Middletown until a church was organized in Upper Houses as it was at that time called, the settlers of this latter place were connected with the church in Middletown 1st society, and in their records were found the register of baptisms of children of the earliest settlers of the town. The records of the Congregational Church in Portland, contained like record. By carefully examining and compiling these several records; also the records of the town of Middletown, which contained records of nearly all of the members of the families of the earliest settlers of the town. From these sources I found material for the foundation of this work, and also the records found in the oldest cemeteries were carefully sought, and brought to aid in the work.

Thus, it will be seen that from above named sources I found a firm foundation on which to build the history and record that was to follow. To this point the work was comparatively easy. But here came up the difficulty how could I find and reach those that had taken up their residence abroad. I adopted this course. First, by writing to those known to me personally, or by reputation, this request: "that they send me their own family records, also names and residence of any others of this name known to them, and any history, tradition, or facts within their knowledge." To those persons whose names were sent me I wrote a like request, and thus the circle extended until it reached all parts of the United States and brought the information sought, in some way, from nearly all. In this undertaking I have written and sent above 2000 letters, and to nearly every State and Territory in the Union.

I have in this work found great difficulty in getting true dates of births of members of the family, arising from conflicting authorities. While the baptismal records are most reliable, it is well known they do not give exact date of birth, only the date of baptism, and this may be months or even years subsequent to date of birth. I have found the town and baptismal records to disagree as to dates. The names given in one were sometimes omitted in the other, and very often records received from different members of the same family disagreed one or two years, and in some cases the record received from members of family, gave date of birth from one to six years more recent than baptismal record gave. These causes will explain why errors may exist, and also shows that true dates can only approximately be found, and my readers will be prepared in view of these difficulties, to overlook any errors they may discover. Thus, will be seen the foundation I had to build upon and the material I had wherewith to construct this work, and the facilities I had at hand. It seemed (to use a figure) like having all the stones to be used in building an edifice first worked out and fitted for their places at the quarry and when brought together they could by no possibility be placed only in their true position. It has been amusing to me the wonder shown by some of my kind correspondents, how I became so well acquainted with their family history, amounting often to the first knowledge they had of their own grandfather's name, and from what place he originated ; and some seem to have formed the opinion that I was some person of venerable age (perhaps little less than a second Methuselah) and have had the curiosity to enquire how it came about that I possessed this knowledge. To all such the foregoing will be sufficient explanation, and by the records I receive from different quarters, a little here and a little from some other quarter far removed. These little lights brought to the aid of what I already possessed, made the whole clear as the noonday sun, and thus I have not failed in a single instance of placing all persons who have forwarded me their records in their true position in this family. By the course pursued of writing to every one whose name and post office address I could learn ; I think I have done all that could be done, and I have received replies, either directly or indirectly, from all but six or eight. These may have never received the letters sent, or from some reason would not reply. I would here state to the credit of the ladies that I have received the most hearty assistance from them in this research, and the records sent me by them have been more plain and accurate than those sent by the men and needed much less labor in preparing this record, and here I acknowledge my indebtedness to them for their valuable aid, without which this work would have contained far more errors than now exist; and also the singular fact, that those of foreign birth, have been far more prompt to give their own records and all the information they could respecting their pedigree, than those belonging to the family itself.

In the spring of 1650 a committee of the General Assembly of Connecticut were appointed to explore the land in Mattabesett, the Indian name by which the present town of Middletown was then called; to report what advantages they would afford for settlement. This committee reported that subsistance could be obtained therein for fifteen families. In the course of that year a settlement commenced therein, and in Nov., 1653, the town received the name of Middletown. In the following year the number of taxable persons was thirty-one. Among those who were the first settlers, Dr. Field, in his statistics of Middlesex Co., a work published in 1819, in giving names of the first settlers, and place of their nativity, gives the names of David Sage and Thomas Wetmore as coming from Wales. Where he found authority for this I am unable to discover, but he doubtless had good authority for so doing. His statement, coupled with the authority of current tradition in the family, would seem to place this matter beyond doubt. David Sage settled upon a tract of land lying in North-east part of present town of Cromwell, and some of his descendants have, to present time, continued to reside upon the same spot.

The place he selected shows his excellent judgment in its selection, the soil being unusually fertile and easy of cultivation, and its situation very picturesque; being about forty rods from banks of the Connecticut river, commanding a complete view thereof for several miles Southward, while it was sheltered on the North by higher land. The locality has always borne the name of Neux, which is supposed to be of aboriginal origin, and which name it still bears, and, in all probability, will continue to bear until the inovation of what is falsely called refined sentiment changes it; but which change, it is to be hoped, is yet to be made far in the future. About twenty-five families of his descendants, bearing his name, reside within a distance of about five miles of the original place of settlement, while others are scattered throughout the Union, some being found in nearly every State and Territory therein.

As regards the parentage of David Sage a great obscurity rests, owing to the imperfection of early records. I have sought in every direction available for authentic fact, without as clear and satisfactory results as I could wish ; and I here place before my friends all the facts I can find bearing upon this subject, with my own conclusions thereupon and my reasons for such conclusions.

I have found different traditions current in the family of its first origin in this country, as follows : one most prevalent and uniform is, That it was David Sage, and that he was a native of Wales. This is doubtless true.

2d. That David Sage settled in this place, at that time a part of the town of Middletown, and remained single until advanced age, when he married and raised a numerous family.

Fact in reply to this : David Sage had attained the age of twenty-four years at the date of his marriage, and was the father of five sons (but three of whom left families) and three daughters.

3d. That the family originated from two brothers : one settled on the East side of Connecticut river in what is the present town of Portland ; the other in Middletown, which tradition, in all probability, sprang from the fact that David Sage, a grandson of first David, was one of the earliest settlers of Chatham, or Portland, as it is now called, about the year 1740, and all of this name, originating from this quarter, are his descendants.

4th. That David Sage imigrated to this country from Scotland with his numerous family of twenty sons.

This tradition is so absurd and without shadow of fact in its support that it scarcely needs mention or reply.

5th. That the family originated from two brothers, one of whom settled somewhere South ; the other in Middletown.

Reply to this tradition : Not a particle of trace exists of more than one family originally. Every record received of the families born in this country leads back distinctly, and unmistakably, to David Sage.

6th. That two brothers were stolen or impressed on board of a British man-of-war during the period of French and Indian wars. That they made good their escape upon their arrival here and from them the family originated. The reply to this tradition is : That no considerable wars existed between England and France at this period. The only wars at this date were those between the first settlers and the aborigines of the country and were carried on by the colonies without the aid of the English government.

Thus having disposed of tradition we come to examine all the facts that can be found relating to this subject. The first appearance of the name of David Sage upon the records of the town of Middletown bears the date Feb. 8, 1664, o. s., and is a deed of land purchased of Mr. Thomas Ranney bearing that date. His marriage to Elizabeth Kirby, his first wife, was about this time. After this his name is of frequent occurrence upon these records, principally in such form as would appear to be merely on inventory of land possessed by him, but sometimes as purchaser of land from others. The records of the town were kept in a very loose and disconnected manner. The writing very poor and indistinct; the lines crooked, often running into one another and containing promiscuous record of Marriages, Deaths, Births, transfer and occupation of lands and other matters which rendered the whole extremely confused and unintelligible, while it would seem that a scarcity of paper existed, which compelled an economical use thereof, and lines were very closely written, and from this confusion it is almost impossible to find the true facts in all cases.

The stone erected to the memory of David Sage gives the date of his death as March, A. D., 1703, o. s., and his age as 64 years, which would give the year of his birth as A. D., 1639. My readers will here perceive that there is a period of 12 years between 1652 and 1664, the time the name first appears in the records of the town. (See appendix.) If, as has been stated, he was one of the first settlers, he could have been only about 13 years of age, and must have come in the care and guardianship of some older person. But as no record of any parent or guardian appears, the question arises how to account for this. The only solution I can find, is in a clause found in his will, bearing date March 27, A. D., 1703. Appendix, note B. This will I found in the Probate office in Hartford, Ct. My object in looking it up was, that perhaps therein might be mentioned the place of his birth in Wales, as this was sometimes done in some ancient wills; but here I was disappointed, but found in this will a clause of this kind: "I give to my eldest son David that lot whereon is the frame of a house, called David's lot, and that one and one-half acre lot of boggy meadow which I bought of mother." In searching in the records of Middletown to find this, and the name of the person conveying the same, I found what seemed to be a correction of the record, viz.: "The lot of land recorded as being bought by David Sage of his mother should have been, 'The lot of land sold to his mother, Elizabeth Randell, late the wife of John Kirby;'" but nothing further here. This record bears date 1684. This Elizabeth Randell at that time was the wife of Abraham Randell, having married him after the decease of John Kirby, 1677. There is some confusion here, as David Sage, March, A. D. 1703, in his will expressly states, nineteen years subsequently to this record, that it was a lot of land bought of his mother ; and there is not found any record of transfer, as would have been the case had there been a sale and repurchase of the same piece of land.

This clause in his will was the first intimation of his parentage that could be brought to light. Following this lead to find who was this person (the widow of John Kirby), I found, among records of other matters, this : "April, 1653, born, Mary, daughter of John Kirby and Elizabeth Randell," this being the language appropriate to use in mentioning the first-born child, but not thereafter. My own conclusion, from the foregoing facts and from the positive language David Sage uses in his will, dated March, 1703, is this : Elizabeth Randell Sage, the mother of David Sage, having been left a widow previous to emigration or during the passage to this country, married John Kirby soon after arrival here, A. D. 1652 ; that David Sage remained under her guardianship and care until his arrival at manhood ; and this will account for the period intervening between 1652 and 1664, or his minority. David Sage married, February, 1664, Elizabeth, daughter of John Kirby, who died 1672. He shortly afterward married Mary Willcox, who survived him. It may be objected to this view, that when David Sage speaks in his will of his mother, that mother-in-law was meant. It is indeed true that he married Elizabeth, daughter of John Kirby. This John Kirby, either before or during his residence in Hartford, 1644, married Elizabeth ——.

In the Hartford records is this entry : "Eli[sabeth] Keerbe, daughter of John Keerbe [was . . .] the eaighteen (or eighteth) day of September, A. D. 1645."

This Elizabeth Keerbe was, without any doubt, David Sage's first wife ; and by a coincidence, her mother's name was Elizabeth. That John Kirby, being a widower, married Elizabeth Randell Sage, 1652. This Elizabeth would be step-sister of David Sage. To those who arrive at a different conclusion in view of the foregoing facts, the difficulty remains that David Sage did not know the distinction between mother and mother-in-law ; and at the time he speaks of his mother he is living with Mary, his second wife, and at a period of thirty-one years subsequent to the decease of his first. It is indeed a striking coincidence of names, but is not more so than is found in at least two places in succeeding records, where names and dates perfectly coincide, but in tracing out the families they are found to be entirely distinct persons. The foregoing is all that can be found that has a bearing upon this subject. Each one can draw their own conclusion whether the view I take is the correct one, or whether "David Sage fell from the sky or rose from the sea." This is all that can be found of the origin of the family in the United States.

The family without doubt was of Scandinavian origin, and the name at first Saga. When the Norsemen conquered Normandy in France, they generally softened the final ending a to e, thus making Saga, Sage, and added a French prefix thereto to denote landed occupation. So the first Norman Sag*a* or Sag*e* added ville or town, thus making it Sag*e*ville or Sag*e*town or land. As these spread from Normandy to other countries the name was subjected to various changes, such as Sarge or Sauge in Germany and Switzerland, and Le Sage (the sage) in France. The name has also a literary signification. The word sag*a* among the Normans meant to say or relate, and the sag*a* man among the Scandinavian tribes was the literary man or historian thereof. The name first found in English history is upon Battle Abbey Roll, 1066. This roll is that made by William the Conqueror after the battle of Hastings, when he divided the English lands among his principal followers. (It is there Sageville.) And as a mark of distinguished favor, a coat of arms was granted, a copy of which has come to my hands. All of the name in England, Scotland and Wales originated in this way. A few are found in Ireland, but the first introduction there was by way of their English conquerors.

The coat of arms mentioned as being by favor of William the Conqueror would seem by the wreath of grain, fruits and flowers, which surrounds it, to indicate a people devoted to agricultural pursuits, which would be a striking confirmation of previous history. It is claimed there are three that purport to be the coat of arms of the Sage family—the one representing a bleeding severed head, the second a group of venerable old men, and the third the one spoken of here. These may all be authentic, but of different national origin. The severed head may represent some event in French history; the group of venerable old men is doubtless of German origin (and here again would be a striking confirmation of the claimed origin of the name); while the third, being the one engraved which accompanies this work, is without doubt, what it purports to be, that given or granted by William the Conqueror, 1066.

This last was brought from London shortly after the conclusion of the war in which the United States achieved their independence of Great Britain by Capt. Nathan Sage, and given by him to his daughter, Mrs. Normand Knox, wife of a former President of Hartford Bank. A fac-simile of the same was wrought in silk by an adopted daughter of the family at great labor and expense, and preserved in the family as a much-prized treasure. This was found by me after I had undertaken this work, and kindly loaned for the purpose of being engraved to accompany it. The motto Non Sibi, the meaning in English is, not for ourselves.

The foregoing is a full history of my labor and its results, and with a few general remarks I close this portion of the work. Any person having correspondence with another has a good opportunity to judge somewhat of the one with whom he corresponds. Taking this as a criterion to form an opinion of the family, the result is highly favorable to its members generally as to education and general intelligence —much above what could be expected. It numbers in its ranks persons in all avocations of life—judges, lawyers, clergymen, doctors of divinity, professors in colleges. teachers, medical doctors, military and naval officers, State senators, representatives, members of Congress, merchants, manufacturers, and mechanics—but a very great majority follow agricultural pursuits. Its record for patriotic devotion to the welfare of our common country is highly gratifying, and many of its members have given their lives for the defense of our valued heritage ; while the large benefactions given for charitable, religious and educational purposes show the family true as steel to their motto engraved on the family coat of arms—Non Sibi—not for ourselves.

GENEALOGICAL RECORD.

DAVID SAGE, 1639.

David Sage, born 1639; a native of Wales; came to Middletown, Ct., 1652, being one of the first settlers. The stone marking his grave is still standing in the Riverside Cemetery, upon the bank of Connecticut river, at north end of Main street, Middletown City. He married Elizabeth, daughter of John Kirby, Feb., 1664. To them were born David, 1665; John, 1668; Elizabeth, 1670; Mary, 1672. His wife Elizabeth then dying, he married, 1673, Mary Willcox. To them were born Jonathan, 1674; Timothy, 1678;* Nathaniel and Marcy, 1680.

DAVID, 1665, (son of David, 1639.)—First in descent from David; ~~one~~ 2 daughters, Mary, 1694. He being in his latter years infirm, and having no family, the Selectmen of the town took his property in charge and provided for him in his old age, as existing records show.

JOHN, 1668.—In the oldest cemetery in the town of Cromwell, Ct., is a monument erected to the memory of John Sage and Hannah, his wife. This is a table of freestone, about 3 feet by 6 feet, and 6 inches in thickness, standing about 2½ feet from the ground, supported by five pillars of stone. On top of same are inserted two slate plates, on which is this inscription:

First Plate.—"Here lies interred the body of Mr. John Sage, who departed this life Jan. ye 22, A. D. 1750-1, in the 83d year of his age. He left a virtuous and sorrowful wife, with whom he lived 57 years and had 15 children; 12 of them married and increased the family by repeated marriages to the number of 29. Of these 15 are alive. He had 120 grandchildren; 105 of them now living; 40 great grandchildren, 37 of them now living, which makes the number of offspring 189."

Second Plate.—"Here lies interred the body of Mrs. Hannah Sage, once the virtuous consort of Mr. John Sage, who both are covered with this stone; and there have been added to the numerous offspring mentioned above, 44 by birth and marriages, which makes the whole number 233. She fell asleep September ye 28, A. D. 1753, in the 83d year of her age."

Note.—By the records of the Congregational Society of Cromwell, Ct., it seems that the society was organized Jan., 1714-15, and the tax list of residents is there given, by which it appears that Mr. John Sage was the second in point of wealth in the society, and the amount of his property subject to taxation amounted to about $13,000, which at that time was considered large.

APPENDIX.

[The town of Middletown originally comprised the present towns of Cromwell, Chatham, Portland and Middlefield, and a large part of Berlin, which explains why the names of residence is given here under these different names of towns. All were in the town of Middletown originally].

NOTE A.

The earliest appearance of the name of David Sage upon any document or record yet discovered is found in a court document preserved in the State Library in Hartford, and is as follows:—

"QUARTER COURT IN HARTFORD—1*st Thursday in December, A. D.* 1655.—Samuel Wells, plaintiff, contra John White, David Sage, Richard Warren, in an action of the case for debeyning of swyne not according to lawe, in the damage of 40 shillings."

The case was found for the defendants.

The following extract from a letter from one of the descendants of David Sage gives a possible interpretation to the relationship between David Sage and the family of John Kirby:—

"A John Kirby came over in the Hopewell in 1635, aged 12 years, and I see no reason why he may not have been the John Kirby of Hartford, Wethersfield and Middletown. The latter had a wife, Elizabeth, and a daughter, Elizabeth, who was born, as stated above (p. 11), in Hartford, Sept. 18, 1645. He died in 1677, leaving a widow, Elizabeth, and the following children: Mary (Buck), aged 32; Hannah (Andrews), 27; Esther (Stone), 25; Sarah (Hubbard), 23; Joseph, 21; Bethia, 18; Susanna (afterwards Cruttenden), 13; and Abigail, 11. The Wethersfield records speak of one child born in 1649, and twins in 1651.

"By the Dorchester (Mass.) records Abraham Randall married Elizabeth Kirby Oct. 21, 1681. Randall afterwards lived in Windsor, Conn.

"The only evidence that I find that John Kirby had two wives each named Elizabeth is, 1st, the entry quoted above (p. 11), which speaks of Mary being born in 1653 of Elizabeth Randall. The date conflicts with that implied by the will of John Kirby, and I suspect that the entry was made after 1681; 2d. David Sage calls Elizabeth Randall his mother, and not mother-in-law.

"To the contrary, is the coincidence of names of John Kirby's wives, if there were two, and the consecution of the ages of his children born after 1650; that is, Hannah, Esther, Sarah, Joseph, Bethia, &c.

"I will only add that Mary Sage must, I think, have been the daughter of David Sage's second wife. Elizabeth Kirby, his first wife, appears to have died in 1670."

Query: Is it not possible that there were two John Kirby's?—[AUTHOR.

Will of David Sage, and Inventory of his property, copied from Probate records of the year 1703, Hartford, Conn.

I, David Sage, Senior, of Middletown, being much weakened in my body by sickness, but having my understanding yet perfect, do make this as my last Will and Testament, revoking all former:

In the first place, I give and bequeath my soul into the hands of the Lord, my Maker, hoping for everlasting salvation through Our Lord Jesus Christ, my Savior and Redeemer; and my body I bequeath to be decently buried. And, for my worldly estate, I do will and order as follows: And first I give and bequeath to my eldest son, David, that lot whereon is the frame of a house called David's lot, and that one and one-half acre lot of boggy meadow which I bought of mother, aud the one-fourth of my boggy meadow in Goose Delight, and my great wood lot on the east side of great river. Item—I give my son John the lot whereon he hath built and doth now inhabit, with my upper lot at Pistol Point where it butts on Scovil, and the one-fourth of my Goose Delight meadow, and my great wood lot next Weathersfield bounds. Item—My two daughters, Bull and Johnson, thirty pounds in pay to each of them, to be paid at my widow's disease. Item—I give my daughter Mercy 50 pounds in pay—20 pounds paid as she needs it, the other 30 at her mother's disease. Item—The rest of my estate, personal and real, I leave with my wife, to be managed by my sons Johnathan and Timothy, so that she have a comfortable maiutainauce her natural life, and at her disease to be shared by said Johnathan and Timothy, debts and legacies paid. It is my will, further, that my son John should have my two lots in Round Meadow.

Note C.

Dea. Orrin Sage is a worthy example of what energy and a fixed purpose can achieve under adverse circumstances. At the early age of six years he was left fatherless, to meet the vicisitudes of life, in such poverty as prevented him from having the least educational advantages; for we learn that, at the age of twenty, he borrowed, from the one to whom he was bound as an apprentice (at the age of fourteen), one month's time for the purpose of attending school, which he paid for by working that length of time after he became of age. He first settled at Ballston Springs, and commenced the manufacture of boots and shoes. He afterward removed to Rochester, where, in company with another, he built up a flourishing business, in which he was engaged at the time of his death in 1866, in the 79th year of his age. But it was not his successful business career that we admire so much as his life of usefulness wherever he was placed, his exceeding great interest in the building up of Christian and benevolent institutions, and sustaining them. It was, in a great measure, owing to his personal efforts that the Rochester University was built up and put in successful operation. In this, and other kindred institutions, he ever manifested a warm interest, and also gave his personal attention. His Christian character shone with unusual luster, and it may truly be said of him, the world was benefited by his example and useful life; and his spirit still lives in his sons, William N. and Edwin O. Sage, of Rochester, N. Y., who follow the path he pointed out and trod, being honored and useful members of society where they reside.

Note D 1.

Phineas Sage, M. D., graduated with the highest honors at college, Cincinnati, Ohio. He adopted the medical profession with marked success; some of his remedies were purchased by other parties, and by their sale have gained wide reputation. During the civil war he held honorable positions in the service of the Government. He has contributed to the columns of various literary and medical journals. He is also a ready speaker, debater, and lecturer. But the great work of his life has been the writing of a work on anthropology, or laws governing man in this life, a work of great originality and interest, which will be published in due time. In his profession he makes it a rule to respond to the needs of the poor as well as of the rich, and the blessing of the poor is his reward for his continued attention and sympathy. His home and family are his greatest earthly comforts, finding there enjoyments found nowhere else.

Note D 2.

Hon. Philander S. Sage, M. D., being left motherless at the early age of nine months, was given to a family of entire strangers. In childhood and early youth he was the subject of harsh and cruel treatment, which was carried to such extent that, at the age of fifteen, he left the family in which he lived (by the advice of those cognizant of the facts), clothed in rags and penniless to meet the vicissitudes of life; but in no ways daunted, he succeeded in gaining a fair education by his own exertions, entered the medical profession, and rose from adversity to take rank as an honorable and useful member of society, being chosen to act for his fellow citizens in various ways in public life. He held, for several years, the honorable position of Senator in the Legislature of Indiana, and at this time, 1877, enjoys the confidence and esteem of his fellow citizens; thus proving that adverse circumstances can be overcome by energetic resolution, and none need be discouraged thereat, ever bearing in mind it is ourselves, and not our surroundings, that make or hinder our obtaining an honorable position among the community.

Note E.

Benjamin, 1754, and Daniel, 1756—(sons of Benjamin, 1725.) Were with Arnold in the Quebec expedition, and endured untold suffering in the retreat from Canada. They were also with Gates at the time of Burgoyne's surrender. An interesting relation is sent me showing that not the men alone possessed all the patriotism or endured the suffering of those times of trial. A sister of Benjamin and Daniel, named Elsie, married a Mr. Clark, also in the army, but sick at Saratoga at that time. She left home to nurse him at a time she required care and attention herself, but felt it to be her place beside the sick bed of her husband. While there, she was taken in travail, succeeded in getting a little ways out of camp, and under an apple tree gave birth to twins (boys). The officers, hearing thereof, had her taken care of, and named the boys Gates and Arnold. Her husband died, but the boys lived to grow up, and were living but a few years since.

Note F.

Miles Sage, about 1758—(son of Daniel, 1725.) Was a soldier in the War of Independence. The following incident is related of him in a work by Hon. John Clements, entitled "Revolutionary Reminiscences of Camden County, N. J." As a vidette in a regiment commanded by Col. Ellis, he was often placed on duty to watch the movements of the enemy. The regiment to which he belonged was stationed at Haddonfield, N. J. The British planned a night attack thereon, with the view of its capture or destruction. Sage, with another soldier, was watching their movements, and at once proceeded to give the alarm. His companion, taking a shorter route, succeeded in giving timely notice, and thus prevented its surprise and capture.

After his regiment had left, Sage rode up, and to his great surprise found that he was in the midst of the British troops, who at the same time noticed that he was an American. He at once put spurs to his horse and escaped in the darkness until he had gained some distance, when his horse was wounded and fell. Before he could disengage himself from his horse, he was attacked and stabbed in various places and left for dead. By order of a Scotch officer, he was removed to a place near by and attended by a surgeon. On examination, he was found to have several severe bayonet wounds. These were carefully dressed, and he was left to the care of the women at that time, and soon after to the care of his mother, by whose careful nursing he finally recovered. The State of New Jersey paid the expenses, his mother being unable to do so. He lived to see the liberties of his country achieved and long thereafter.

NOTE G 1.

SPARROW S. SAGE, 1781. During the War of 1812 he met with the following adventure. During a short absence from home an Indian entered his house and took his wife captive, and with another woman whom he also captured hastily left with his prisoners for Fort Niagara, then in possession of the British. He, returning home, at once saw the situation, and being armed only with an axe immediately started in pursuit. He soon overtook the Indian, and attacked him at once. The Indian attempted to shoot him on his approach, but his gun missed fire. Sage struck him with his axe, wounding him severely. He dropped his gun and tomahawk and turned to escape, but was followed so closely that he very soon received a second blow from the axe, which caused his death in a short time. The victor returned home with his rescued captives in triumph, and the Indian's gun and tomahawk as trophies, which are still in possession of the family. But the fright and excitement was so great as to cause the death of his wife, which occurred shortly afterward.

NOTE G 2.

COL. HEZEKIAH SAGE, 1790. A distinguished citizen of Hamilton County, N. Y. The county town was named Sageville in his honor. Amid the stirring scenes of the present time (1877) in the far West, it would not be out of place to make note of the life and adventures of Luther Sage Kelly, grandson of Hezekiah, and son of his daughter, Mrs. Janet E. Kelly; who, led by a romantic desire for a hunter's life in the wilds of the Yellowstone country, has spent 11 years in those wild, romantic regions, until his habits and tastes have become so fixed that civilization has less charms to him than the wild, stormy life he has led for so long a time. He is known among the Indians as Lone Wolf, from being so much by himself; also, as The-man-that-never-lays-down-his-gun, from the fact that it is always ready for any emergency that may arise; but among the frontiersmen as Yellowstone Kelly. Gen. Miles, in his pursuit of the Indians, felt the need of a trusty scout. Having heard of Kelly, he sent a messenger to him requesting an interview. By a coincidence, he (Kelly) had taken a liking to Gen. Miles, and was on his way to headquarters. Meeting the messenger sent for him upon the way, he sent his card to the General on his arrival, in the shape of a claw of a grizzly bear of large size (1,400 lbs.), which he had killed on his way. The singularity of this idea pleased the General very much, and he holds the card thus sent in high esteem. In his intercourse with Gen. Miles they meet on terms of equality, requiring no orderly to admit him to the presence of the General, who holds him in high esteem, and gives his opinion of him that he is the most unexceptionable combination of the hunter, soldier and gentleman that he ever met. His reticence is such that even those most intimate with him rarely hear him speak of his adventures, and a person may pass the whole day with him without farther conversation than is necessary under the circumstances. He has lived alone so much that he finds nature more a companion to his taste than mankind. He does not boast of his exploits in the least degree. When once asked the number of Sioux he had passed to the happy hunting grounds, he replied, that he had kept no record; being still pressed, he was asked if as many as 20; he replied, with a nod, "may be." He has had so many hairbreadth escapes that he thinks he has grown superstitious, and believes there is a Providence that carries him through the greatest emergency; but he does not rely upon the idea so as to let down his care and watchfulness, or self-reliance. His many adventures would form an interesting book of itself, and are too long to be related in this brief sketch. At this time he is with the army, hunting down the Sioux Indians that have caused so much trouble in the Western Territories.

NOTE H.

COMFORT SAGE, born 1731, held the commission of Colonel in the War of Independence. It appears that he was a person of wealth and influence in the town of Middletown, being often elected to public offices, which places he filled with honor to himself and benefit to the community. This family is the only one in the family of David Sage that was the owner of slaves. Of these they held several before slavery was abolished in Connecticut. Some of these were known to the author, and many anecdotes are told of them and their doings. In the records of Middletown is this entry: "Record of births of children of Gen. Comfort Sage and his negroes;" "Record of births of children of Ebenezer Sage's negroes." I have been informed by a friend that he has met persons of African descent bearing the name of Sage. This will explain why this is so. It was a custom for these persons to assume the surname of their owners. I will not say masters, for these were often the masters, judging by their conduct.

NOTE I.

MOSES SAGE, 1783—(son of Hezekiah, 1745.) Was impressed by the British, and was several years on board their fleet. Attempting to escape therefrom, he was detected and sentenced to be whipped through the fleet. The night before the sentence was to be executed he succeeded in lowering himself through one of the port-holes, and swimming to the French coast, about three miles distant, thus escaped.

NOTE J.

MOSES SAGE, 1754. Removed to Bennington, Vt., 1755-6, where he engaged largely in the tanning business, employing many persons therein. To such an extent was this business carried on, that North Bennington bore the name of Sage's City. He was at the battle of Bennington.

NOTE K.

WILLIAM SAGE, 1748. He was in the War of Independence. Immediately after the massacre at Lexington of the Americans by British soldiers, an event that roused the country to arms, he, like thousands of others, left family and business, hastened to the scene of conflict, and was at the battle of Bunker Hill. He was afterwards in other places in this State, when the citizens were called upon to resist invasion of the enemy. He died in 1831, lamented and respected by all who knew him.

NOTE L. (p 65

HENRY W. SAGE is a prominent and highly esteemed citizen of Brooklyn, N. Y. He is extensively engaged in the lumber business, having large establishments for manufacturing the same located in several different States, and is noted for the interest he takes in the benevolent and educational enterprises of the day, contributing largely for their support.

Note M.

Hon. Orrin Sage, a resident of Ware, Mass., was highly esteemed for his many virtues, and held many offices of honor and trust from the hands of his fellow citizens. The town of Sage, Mitchell county, Iowa, derives its name from him, he being a large owner of land situated therein. He ever manifested a warm interest in its prosperity, contributing largely to the erection of churches and the founding of a public library; and, by his aid and effort, giving an impetus to its prosperity. At his death, in 1875, a gloom was spread over the community. Memorial services were held, and business entirely suspended, all classes uniting in paying tribute to his worth and respect to his memory.

Note N.

Capt. Nathan Sage, 1752, was in privateering service, the only navy of the colonies in the War of Independence. He distinguished himself by the capture of an English transport vessel laden with powder, an article much needed by Americans at that time, and succeeded in bringing his prize safely into New London, although closely pursued by the British, for which he was admitted to the floor of Congress. He was a party in the Holland purchase, in western New York, and took up his residence there, where he filled the office of judge and other important situations. At the time of his death, which was A. D. 1833, he held the position of collector of the port of Oswego, N. Y.

Note O 1.

Elisha L. Sage, 1809, the author of this work, was endowed with certain characteristics necessary to the prosecution of this work, in a prominent degree. 1st, the courage to undertake a work beset with so many difficulties, and that seemed a hopeless and impossible task; 2d, the patience to meet disappointment, and often neglect from those that might, by trifling assistance, have lightened the labor, without faltering in his purpose; 3d, perseverance to pursue the work in hand in spite of difficulties that seeemed insurmountable, until success crowned the effort; and 4th, actuated by the true spirit of the family motto, Non Sibi (not for ourselves), the folly to have the results printed for the benefit of others at his own pecuniary loss, but he trusts that a large majority of the family will appreciate the motive, and be grateful that the work has been accomplished and placed in the hands of this numerous family.

Note O 2.

Rufus B. Sage, possessing a romantic and adventurous disposition, following the bent of his inclinations, in the year 1841 left, in company with five others, for the Rocky Mountain region to try the charms of a hunter's life. He was the only one that reached that locality. After spending about three years in this romantic life, a large portion thereof entirely alone, and having many perilous adventures, he returned home and published an interesting account of his adventures, entitled, "Scenes in the Rocky Mountains, which met with such success as to call forth several editions. Being satisfied with his experience, he now remains at home, often indulging in remeniscenses of past scenes, but not wishing to try them again.

NOTE P.

HON. RUSSELL SAGE, 1816, is another example of what energy and enterprize may achieve under adverse circumstances. Having in childhood and early youth to suffer the deprivations incident to indigence and want, he has risen, by his own resources, to the position of Member of Congress, and is, at this time (1877), one of the largest railroad owners in the United States.

The following is a list of those that are known to have been in the War of Independence:

WILLET M. SAGE, 1756—(son of Lewis Samuel). Died in the service.

HOSEA SAGE. 1761—(son of Solomon). Died at West Point.

BENJAMIN, 1754, and DANIEL, 1756—(sons of Benjamin). With Arnold at Quebec and Saratoga.

MILES SAGE, 1758—(son of Daniel).

ENOS SAGE, 1757, and ELIAS SAGE, 1759—(sons of Samuel).

ABIEL SAGE, 1758—(son of Jedediah).

COL. COMFORT SAGE, 1731—(son of Ebenezer).

EBENEZER SAGE, 1754—(son of Col. Comfort).

GIDEON SAGE, 1739—(son of Gideon).

EPPAPHRAS SAGE, 1757—(son of Timothy).

DAVID SAGE, 1747—(son of Deacon David). Was wounded at Quebec, and died of his wounds.

ABNER SAGE, 1756—(son of Deacon David).

STEPHEN SAGE, 1757, and SIMEON SAGE, 1759—(sons of Solomon). Three years in the service.

WILLIAM SAGE, 1748—(son of Amos). At Bunker Hill.

NATHAN SAGE, 1752—(son of Amos). In privateer service.

ELISHA SAGE, 1755—(son of Amos).

MOSES SAGE, 1754—(son of Johnathan). At Bennington.

The whole number, between 16 and 45 years (including those exempted by disability), was 64. Of these, 20 are known to have been in the War of Independence, and doubtless some others of whom no record of service has been given.

A very large number were in the army in the late civil war. The number cannot be ascertained. The following lost their lives in service, and probably a still larger number, as by inadvertence no mention was made of the fact when the record of their family was given.

JAMES A. SAGE, 1835, Indiana—(son of Dr. Philander S.)

ROBERT W. SAGE, 1842, Jacksonville, N. Y.—(son of John R.)

The first family of the name of Sage that settled in the United States, after David, 1652, was a person (name lost) that immigrated from England or Wales, 1740-5, settled in Rockingham County, Va., and had several sons. The following persons and families appear to be descendants from this person:—

The descendants of this family (1745–50) are scattered throughout Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, and other Western States, in considerable numbers.

2d. The next family was that of JAMES SAGE, of London, who immigrated 1770. He was with Washington at the battle of Monmouth, settled in Grayson County, West Virginia, and left 4 sons that had families, Samual, James, Sampson, Charles, and 1 daughter, who was captured by Cherokee Indians, 1791, and sold by them to the Wyandotts, 1811. She was found by her brother Charles in Kansas, 1848. During her captivity she became the wife of three chiefs: 1st. Crain; 2d. Between-the-Logs; 3d. Frost. She outlived them all, and died in 1850, leaving no descendants. This family removed to Western Missouri, where their descendants now reside.

3d. The next in point of time was JAMES SAGE (Scotch), who came a soldier in the British army to Boston, 1775. He left or deserted, and married a Massachusetts lady (Miss Greely), 1777. He left 1 son. His descendants, few in number, reside in Michigan.
